

Origo wall lamp structure flips horizontally to bring its shadows and light into a new context. Paring a volcanic rock sphere together with an opal glass diffuser, the contrast and tension between the materials become evident. An interaction of two different materials, a highlight of texture and shine.

The handmade recinto volcanic stone is illuminated by the opal glass, uncovering its nature and character. A sculptural geometry that plays in an arrangement of many, as it would be dancing onto the wall, its light full of character.
